What to expect in HSBC Value Fund?

4

When to Sell?

- 1 Valuation re-rating has happened
- 2 Special situation event played out
- 3 When 'value' stocks become 'growth' stocks
- 4 Realisation that stock is a 'value trap'

Sector allocation

HSBC Value Fund

Overweight

- Textiles & Apparels: Quality companies impacted by tariff reasons. Bilateral treaties with UK, EU and US should benefit these companies.
- Banks: Overweight Mid-cap Private Banks & PSU Banks. Strong credit demand with stable NIMs/ asset quality could drive strong PPOP/ PAT growth.
- Industrial Products: Exposure through small cap stocks with company specific positive triggers
- Agricultural Food & other products: Exposure through a sugar manufacturing company and coffee manufacturer with healthy export mix
- Realty: Mix of mid and small cap companies with exposure to different regions and segments

Underweight

- Pharmaceuticals & Biotechnology: Underweight generics and hospitals/ diagnostics due to lack of value plays
- IT - Software: Despite steep correction in stocks, overhang of earnings cut results in 'adjusted valuations' unattractive
- Telecom - Services: Larger companies in the sector have seen significant valuation re-rating on strong earnings and cash flow growth
- Automobiles and Auto Components: Strong rally post the GST cuts has resulted in consistent reduction in weights over the past six months
- Retailing: No exposure to new-age retail platform companies

Past performance may or may not be sustained in future and is not a guarantee of any future returns.

Sector allocation trend

HSBC Value Fund

- Cut exposure in Materials in June 2026 quarter post the strong rally over the past year booking profits
- Increased weights in Consumer Discretionary in 2Q26. Higher exposure in good quality Retail companies that had witnessed correction over the past year due to company-specific issues. Bilateral/ Free trade agreements should benefit Textile companies, where we saw increased allocation in May-June 2026.
