

With diversity comes the potential of a match-winning team.

As team captain, you need to pick a good line up of batsmen, bowlers, fielders and all-rounders who can pool in their skills for the benefit of the team. And as captain of your investments too, you must ensure a healthy mix of asset classes that can tide over market fluctuations, global and domestic economic uncertainties, etc.

Here’s how investing across different asset classes can help

Play the Tail with Debt

Government securities, corporate bonds, money market instruments may have comparatively lower risk for short and medium term horizon.

Go for Gold, Silver, Etc.

Commodities as an asset class can help diversify your portfolio by investing in gold, silver, etc. They can act as a hedge against inflation and economic and geopolitical uncertainty.

Powerplay with Equities

Equities or stocks of companies can help you to create wealth and aim to beat long term inflation.

Play the Field with Real Estate

Well-chosen assets like real estate could help bring in regular rental returns and the possibility to leverage your asset to build wealth over the long term.

Go for extras with Fixed Deposits

Small runs here and there all add up. Conservative investors can turn towards fixed deposits as they may offer relative safety, security and peace of mind.

Beyond Boundaries with Global Stocks

Investing globally helps capture opportunities in global markets for further diversification and growth potential, albeit with higher risk due to geopolitical events.
